ABOUT AVIATORS CLUB

Aviators Club is a tribute to the origins of the current location of United Sports.

Years ago, when Downingtown and West Bradford Township were mostly farming communities, a man named Park Book informally ran the Downingtown airstrip on some farmland in the middle of West Bradford Township. At that time the airport was comprised of two grass runways, the longest of which was 2000 feet, and a few small hangars.

Aviation is an expensive hobby and it was hard to keep the airport afloat financially, so Park Book sold the airport to Bob Shannon Sr. in 1961. About the same time, Shannon purchased a former airway light beacon from a closed airfield near the town of Compass, Pennsylvania. In the 1920's and 1930's, airmail pilots used this beacon to deliver mail to rural communities. Shannon bought the light beacon for $1, disassembled it, trucked it to his new airport, and reassembled it to serve as the Downingtown Airport rotating beacon tower. The tower remains in that location today - currently in the middle of the United Sports parking lot.

The Downingtown airport thrived under the direction of Bob Shannon as he continued to expand the enterprise, paving the runway to 3000 feet and offering flying lessons and private plane services. In his honor it was renamed Shannon Memorial Airport after his death in 1970. His family operated the airport until it closed to the public in the early 1990s.

The Shannon airport was home to many of Chester County's most active pilots who started their aviation careers with flying lessons at this rural airstrip.

United Sports was built on the site of the Shannon airport in 1998.
